

Roy Stevens

PRESIDENT, INTELLIGENCE GROUP

Roy Stevens serves as the President of Leidos' Intelligence Group where he is responsible for delivering a wide variety of programs across the U.S. Intelligence Community as well as for defense, intelligence, and other government customers in Australia. Programs in his portfolio cover the gamut of capabilities that underpin customers' most important priorities, including cyber, software development, key management, AI/ML, deep analytics, intelligence analysis, C4ISR and logistics.

Prior to this assignment, Stevens served as the Chief of Business Development and Strategy where he led the development of the long-term strategy of the corporation and all aspects of business growth including a pipeline of $160 billion and annual contract awards exceeding $17 billion. In this role, he oversaw account management, marketing, communications, and U.S. government legislative affairs.

Ahead of Leidos' 2016 merger with Lockheed Martin's Information Systems and Global Solutions (IS&GS), Stevens spent 20 years with Lockheed Martin. There, he served in a variety of executive level positions both in program execution overseeing large complex programs and business development for multiple lines of business spanning tactical airborne systems, missiles and fire control, and rotary and mission systems. Stevens has also been integral to the merger and acquisition of several companies during his career, most recently the purchase of Cobham Aviation Services Australia's Special Mission business in Australia.

With over 30 years in the aerospace and defense industry, Stevens has a broad background in engagements with customers across the globe. He has delivered programs in more than 20 different countries, including both direct commercial and foreign military sale (FMS) projects. These projects have spanned from missile production, special mission aircraft integration, command and control, logistics and complex information technology delivery for all four branches of the armed services, as well as civilian agency customers.

Stevens is an active member of the community, including currently serving on the Board of Directors for Cornerstones, a stability and empowerment charity serving the Dulles corridor. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in finance from Oregon State University and a Master of Business Administration degree from Washington State University.